

The Davis Historical Society Papers on Davis History

Reported by John Lofland

The Davis Historical Society Papers on Davis History is a set of short articles published on the Society's web site at www.davishistoricalsociety.org.

The "Introduction to the Series" states:

The purposes of this series, Papers on Davis History, are to publish article-length original research studies, data compilations and photographic collections on aspects of the history of Davis, California. Initially, publication will be electronic by means of the Society's web site. In time, there may also be print versions.

Anyone who has compiled a photographic montage or data assemblage or has completed a research article on Davis history is encouraged to submit it to the Society's Publications Committee to be considered for publication in the series. Details are available on the Publications Committee page at www.davishistoricalsociety.org

At the time of this report in November, 2005, there were three papers in the series, which are:

1. A Minimal Traditional House: 647 G Street, Davis, Tanya Lieberman, 2003 [four pages, including a page with three photographs].
2. Pre-WWII Views of North Davis: Pictures from Lofland and Haig, Davis, CA, 1910s-40s, John Lofland, 2003 [eight pages consisting of 15 photographs of the Old North Davis neighborhood].
3. Nineteenth-Century Davis, California Buildings Standing in 20003. Merrily DuPree, 2003 [3 pages with lists of addresses].
